ORDER

In my order dated August 27, 2008, I directed that all documents should be filed only in the main case number 4:08MD1964 RWS and that nothing should be filed in the individual cases.

However, in order to create a complete record in individual cases, motions and documents that are directed only at an individual case should be filed only in the individual case and not in the main case. Any motions to dismiss or for summary judgment directed to an individual case should only be filed in that case. The parties should not file a “motion” in main case which is directed only at one or several individual cases.

The party filing a motion in an individual case should file a “notice” in the main case that such a motion has been filed. For example, Defendants should file a motion to dismiss for failing to provide a fact sheet only in the individual case. A notice of the filing should be filed in the main case. If motions based on a similar grounds are filed in several individual cases on the same day, only one notice needs to be filed in the main case which lists the individual cases effected.

Accordingly,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that any motions and documents that are directed only at an individual case should be filed only in the individual case and not in the main case. A notice of the filing of a motion in an individual case should be filed in the main case.
